What is an ILWU Associate Member?

An ILWU Associate Member is anyone who:

- Wants to maintain an association with the ILWU;
- Applies for membership;
- Supports and abides by the policies of the ILWU; and
- Pays Associate Member fees (not the same as union dues).

Associate Members may be pensioners, former members laid off by ILWU companies, disabled members unable to return to work, spouses and relatives of ILWU members, workers from ILWU organizing drives (unsuccessful or current), and students.

What benefits would I receive as an ILWU Associate Member?

1. The Voice of the ILWU, the monthly newspaper of the ILWU Local 142, featuring information on ILWU activities, viewpoints, current issues, and much more.
2. Access to Union Privilege, an organization set up by the AFL-CIO to offer benefit programs like: Union MasterCard, legal services, life insurance, mail-order discount prescription drugs, mortgage program, loan program, and driver and traveler service. To be eligible for benefits, you must enroll in the union privilege program of your choice and pay any required fees.
3. An ILWU Associate Member card identifying you as an ILWU Associate Member. This means you are associated with the ILWU for non-collective bargaining purposes.

What are some activities for ILWU Associate Members?

ILWU Associate Members may participate in the union's ongoing programs for political action, pensioners, and sports.

Those from defunct units are encouraged to maintain a group identity and develop their own activities.

What are the fees for ILWU Associate Members?

Fees will depend on your current status: ILWU pensioner, employed, or not employed. Membership must be renewed annually.

Fees are:

- Pensioners/Retirees $12/year
- Employed $24/year
- Not employed $12/year
